PREFATORY NOTE.

This third (and the last) part of the Catalogue of the Library of the late John Gerard Heckscher will probably interest a larger number of book-buyers than the two previous parts, as the contents cover a wider range of subjects. There are at the beginning a number of lots under the caption "Fisheries" that will attract the collector of Fishing literature. Then comes "Sporting." The books under this head covers a large field, but in this collection there is nothing on the subject of fish or fishing in any of the volumes. Nearly all sportsmen are both hunters and fishers, the rod and the gun being almost inseparable. The same may be said of the birds, and under Ornithology will be found many attractive and rare works. Duelling Literature is not so common, and it is seldom that so many titles on the subject will be found in one library, but it is a subject in which Mr. Heckscher was deeply interested, so he bought every volume that came under his notice. The works under the caption of Miscellaneous are comparatively few, but there are some very desirable volumes which will attract the general collector.

HENRY THORPE ("WALTON").
